Asian fans cheer 'Linsanity'

BYLINE: By Madison Park, CNN

SECTION: WORLD

LENGTH: 513 words

DATELINE: Hong Kong

Jeremy Lin, the undrafted Cinderella of the last NBA season, got peppered with questions by adoring fans and children in Hong Kong.

What's it like seeing your name on a jersey? In short: "Weird."

Did your parents want you to be a lawyer or doctor? No.

Can you speak Mandarin? Some.

SUBSEQUENT HISTORY: On remand at, Injunction granted at Apple, Inc. v. Samsung Elecs. Co., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88436 (N.D. Cal., June 26, 2012)

PRIOR HISTORY: [1]
Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California in Case No. 11-CV-1846, Judge Lucy H. Koh.
Apple, Inc. v. Samsung Elecs. Co., 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 139049 (N.D. Cal., Dec. 2, 2011)

DISPOSITION: AFFIRMED IN PART, VACATED IN PART, and REMANDED.

CASE SUMMARY

PROCEDURAL POSTURE: Plaintiff patent owner had earlier moved for a preliminary injunction to block the importation into and sale within the United States of the accused devices of defendants, alleged infringers. The U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California denied the patent owner's motion with respect to each of the accused devices and all four asserted patents. The patent owner appealed.

OVERVIEW: The patents pertained to smartphones and tablet computers. While the appeal presented substantial issues of law and fact, the decision whether to issue a preliminary injunction was one that was committed to the discretion of the district court, which made the patent owner's task in overturning that decision a difficult one. As to three of the four patents at issue in this appeal, the court concluded that the patent owner had not satisfied its burden of demonstrating an abuse of discretion, and it therefore affirmed the denial of preliminary injunctive relief. As to the fourth patent, the court concluded that the district court committed legal error in one important respect. Specifically, in the absence of a qualifying primary reference, the district court erred in concluding that there was likely to be a substantial question as to the validity of the D'889 patent. Because the district court had not yet weighed the balance of hardships to the parties and the public interest factors, the court did not have a sufficient basis for concluding that the failure to enter an injunction was an abuse of discretion. Thus, the court vacated that portion of the order.

OUTCOME: Affirmed in part, vacated in part, and remanded. In particular, the court affirmed the denial of a preliminary injunction with respect to the D'087, D'677, and '381 patents. It vacated the order denying an injunction with respect to the D'889 patent and remanded the case to the district court for further proceedings on that portion of the patent owner's motion for preliminary relief.

CORE TERMS: patent, irreparable harm, tablet, preliminary injunction, injunction, front, infringement, smartphone, injunctive relief, screen, public interest, infringing, visual, patented, flat, surface, phone, nexus, balance of hardships, edge, impression, display, substantial questions, market share, brand, consumer, user, rectangular, infringed, electronic

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Injunctions > Preliminary & Temporary Injunctions
Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Abuse of Discretion

HN1 A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest. The decision to grant or deny a preliminary injunction lies within the sound discretion of the district court, and an appellate court will not reverse its judgment absent an abuse of that discretion.

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Injunctions > Preliminary & Temporary Injunctions
Patent Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Injunctions

HN2 To show irreparable harm, it is necessary to show that the infringement caused harm in the first place. Sales lost to an infringing product cannot irreparably harm a patentee if consumers buy that product for reasons other than the patented feature. If the patented feature does not drive the demand for the product, sales would be lost even if the offending feature were absent from the accused product. Thus, a likelihood of irreparable harm cannot be shown if sales would be lost regardless of the infringing conduct.

ANY country living beside an economic and cultural colossus tends to shore up its se ferences and ignoring its similarities. Few nations have mastered this better than Canada, which for decades ounterpart to the United States. But under Stephen Harper, Canada's Conservative prime minister since 20 verging. While Barack Obama has embraced policies that Canadians hold dear, such as near-universal health care and stricter financial regulation, Mr Harper has been importing many hallmarks of American Republicanism. Mr Obama's expansion of government has generated a fierce backlash from the tea-party movement. Will Mr Harper suffer a similar rebellion in reverse?
